

Food cultures in Thailand

- 日時 November 8, 2022 (Tuesday) 13:00-15:00
- 場所 Hybrid
- 言語 Japanese and English
- 概要

Thailand has many tourist destinations, such as Phuket Island, and many of the dishes favored by the Japanese, such as tom yang kung fu. In addition, Thailand has an "insect-eating" culture, where insects are eaten as a traditional food, either as a snack or as a side dish. In this event, we will introduce the "Food cultures in Thailand", "The change in awareness of food cultures in Thailand before and after studying abroad and daily life in Thailand", and "Attitudes and differences for food culture between Thai and Japanese from psychology". In the general discussion, we will discuss the acceptance of food cultures from psychology and cooking methods etc.

| 時間 | 講演者 | プログラム |
|-------------|--|--|
| 13:00-13:05 | Opening remarks, explanation of the main purpose of the lecture, introduction of speakers | |
| 13:05-13:25 | Chitiphon Chuaicham | Food cultures in Thailand |
| 13:30-13:50 | Kanako Yoshimine | The change in awareness of food cultures in Thailand before and after studying abroad and daily life in Thailand |
| 13:55-14:15 | Kun Qian | Attitudes and differences for food culture between Thai and Japanese from psychology |
| 14:20-15:00 | General discussion: Discussion of the acceptance of food cultures from psychology and cooking methods etc. | |

■講演者

※スケジュール等は都合により変更の可能性があります。

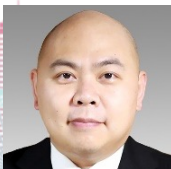

Chairman
Asst. Prof. Tatsuya Mishima
Faculty of Social and Cultural Studies, Kyushu University
(Kyushu University institute for Asian and Oceanian studies)

Res. Asst. Prof. Chitiphon Chuaicham
Faculty of Engineering, Kyushu University

Assoc. prof. Kanako Yoshimine
Department of Humanities, National Defense Academy of Japan

Assoc. prof. Kun Qian
Kyushu University institute for Asian and Oceanian studies

